HICKMAN COTTON MARKET AHEAD OF ALL OTHERS.

It seems that Hickman this year is leading all near-by cotton markets in the prices paid. As a result, cotton came here Saturday from Medley, Wolf Island, Troy, Tiptonville, Union City, Do-Woodland and various points in all directions within a radius of 25 miles. Dozens of loads were at the gins by sun rise, and two loads from Missouri stayed all night, getting here Friday evening late. The Courier has called attenton to the fact, during other seasons, when Hickman markets were below those around us; and, now, we want to compliment our buyers on leading the market. It has been a big help to the town and we hope it will continue.

Many of those, who came from near other towns, say the best day's work they did in connection with their cotton crop was the hauling to Hickman, where prices were sufficient to more than pay for the hauling, as compared with the local markets.

PRESIDENT WILSON TO WED MRS. GALT.

President Wilson and Mrs. Norman Galt whose engagement was announced Wednesday night will be married probably in the first week of December. The ceremony will be private, only a few of the couple's friends being present. It will take place at the house of the bride on New Hampshire avenue near Dupont circle at Washington.

Plans for the honeymoon have not been completed but it is intimated that the trip might indude San Diego exposition.

The pictures, of Mrs. Galt show her to be a rather stout young woman, with a wealth of lark hair and bright eyes, with an expression calculated to make a 58-year old president jump sideways. She has a round, prety face, and all accounts agree that she belongs to the F. F. V. and possesses a disposition sweet enough to get along with step-children.

Of course cotton should be the chief money crop of the south, and will always be the commanding crop, but the southern people themselves will never prosper, even if they would get 50 eents a pound for cotton, if they bought everything that grows on the farm from some other country.

And southern merchants and southern cities will have no assured prosperity if this is the order of living in the south. No matter if cotton were to bring 50 cents a pound, the scale of expense would be raised to about 48 cents and maybe 51 cents.

We cannot eat cotton, and if cotton goes to a low figure we are in a bad way. That is what happened to us last fall.

News Snapshots 'Of the Week

Phillies came in for a great deal of attention. The war as affecting the Balkans took a most peculiar turn when Venizelos of Greece, war premier, was again forced to resign by the king, although he was voted the confidence of the chamber. This action took place as 70,000 French troops landed at Saloniki, Greece, fearing Bulgaria's attitude. The surprise of the week came when it was announced that the human voice had carried from Washington to Honolulu, 4,900 miles, by wireless telephony. The whole state of Indiana by official decree celebrated the birthday of James Whitcomb Riley, the poet. Lawson Purdy, tax commissioner of New York city, asked a personal tax on over $3,000,000,000. President Wilson announced coming marriage to Mrs. Norman Galt, a Washington widow. Dr. Dumba, recalled Austrian ambassador, sailed.

"SIX UNIVERSITY GIRLS" GOOD ENTERTAINERS.

Music lovers enjoyed a treat at the Crystal Theatre Monday evening with the opening number of the Crystal's lyceum entertainment course, presenting "Six University Girls," in readings, instrumental and vocal music. The young ladies composing the sextette are all finished musicians and rendered a delightful, varied program.

The entertainment merited a much larger house than was given but in the natural order of things, the remaining numbers will doubtless draw better crowds. This is about the first entertainment of the kind offered since the old opera house went out of commission, and it was refreshing in a measure to see again something behind the footlights other than "canned drama," or movie stuff.

CONTROL HESSIAN FLY.

Sow winter wheat after the Hessian Fly has dissappeared and save next year's crop from the ravages of the pest, says the Department of Agriculture expert This advice may still be applied during the present month in the great wheat belt lying between the thirty-fifth and fortyfirst parallels of latitude. If the fly has been starved out by burying or disking all stuble and ruined wheat fields, and all volunteer wheat has been plowed under or otherwise destroyed. an infestation the following year may be prevented by sowing after the approximate fly-free date.

The Hessian fly of the second or fall generation is likely to infest all volunteer wheat sown before the fly-free date. "Flaxseed" of the second generation remain on the fall-sown wheat plants till the following April, when adults issue and produce young which begin another season of the second generation, emerge from the "flaxseed" stage from the middle of August to late October, according to latitude. The female fly does not live beyond five or six days, and thus it is that late sowing, after the flies have largely disappeared, is the most practical and effective method employed to control the pest.

The teachers association will meet at the new consolidated school Saturday, Oct 16th, from nine until eleven o'clock. Visitors welcome.

Sylvan Shade has organized a School Improvement League with eighteen members. A good league is a help to any school and we predict that a greater interest in school matters will be awakened through the efforts of these metabers.

Several districts are adding to the libraries and others will do so later in the term.

Roper district is enjoying the new game of volley ball. Palestine and Fair View have just begun basket ball. We are glad to see the equipment for these games placed on the play grounds.

Tyler district has just purchased some good pictures for their school room.

CITY TICKET NAMED: PETITIONS ARE FILED.

Tuesday was the last day for filing petitions for names to be placed on the official ballot for councilmen of the City of Hickman. A petition, properly drawn and heavily endorsed, was filed, we understand, with County Clerk Roper, with the following names thereon:

> A. O. Caruthers H. O. Stoneeipher Ernest Johnson

W. T. Grissom H. C. Helm

D. P. Leibovitz.

It would be hard to pick six better fellows for this place; they are all well qualified, representative, business men, who have the interest of - Hickman heart. We notice that the mayor and most of the old councilmen headed the list on the petition. As the old councilmen all objected to reiled, the new ticket should "win around.

in a walk." On the city ticket will also appear the proposition of voting on small bond issue for the purpose of purchasing some badly needd fire fighting apparatus. From what we can learn, there will be some objection to this issue, but failure to vote on it will mean an increase in insurance rates alnost equivalent to the amount of oonds asked for. In fact, the insurance companies are merely waiting to see what we do about this matter before making an announcement that will cause peo ple who carry fire insurance to sit up and take notice. Several have already pulled out on account of a lack of fire protection; and lines. nany others will go if the issue is defeated. If any remain, they will do so on an advanced rate, ranging from 10 to 20 per cent, which has been calculated by local agents to be equal to what the fire motor truck would cost. From business point of view, it seems hat it would be good business to ote the bonds; at least, it would be well to give the matter serious onsideration before making up ur minds to vote against it. The mount asked, we believe, is $7,500.

SYNOPSIS.

John Bellamy Smart, unmarried and heir to a fortune, while abroad with his Poopendyke, and his valet, Britton, buys a dilapidated old castle on the Danube, in care of the Schmicks, and discovers a mysterious woman inhabiting

Smart fails to batter down a huge door ading to the east wing in search of the fair tady. He interrupts a visit of Amer-

Their amusing attempts to buy some of castle's ancient furniture result in their discomfiture and hurried departure. Smart catches a glimpse of his fair neighor's waving hair.

Another visit to the mysterious east ing fails, but later the beautiful stranger strikes up an acquaintance with the new owner through a secret loophole.

She agrees to entertain him at tea. Meanwhile he learns the history of the eld castle from the Schmicks and receives a visit from a crowd of tourists.

Refusing to be put off by the fair chatine's plea of a headache, Smart batters down the doors to the maiden's partments, where a surprise awaits him. He learns she is a rich American girl. divorced from her nobleman husband, and is in hiding, having kidnaped her own

The Hazzards, friends of Smart, visit the castle, bringing with them the count-ess' husband, masquerading as Mr. Pless. Smart learns the villain's identity.

CHAPTER X. I Receive Visitors.

HE east wing of the castle was as still as a mouse on the day my house party arrived. Grim old doors took on new padlocks, keyholes were carefully stopped up, creaking floors were calked, and yet I trembled. My secret seemed to be safely planted, but what would the Elsie Hazzard presented me to ber friends, and with lordly generosity I presented the castle to them.

There was a Russian baron whom for brevity's sake I'll call Umovitch. There was a Viennese gentleman of twenty-six or eight, I heard, but who looked forty. His name was Pless. He was a plain mister. The more 1 saw of him the first afternoon the more I wondered at George Hazzard's carelessness. Then there were two very bright and charming Americans, the Billy Smiths. He was connected with the American embassy at Vienna, and I liked him from the start. The baron was in the Russian embassy and was really a very nice boy.

"And this Mr. Pless, who is be?" I asked.

Elsie was looking at the rakish young man with a pitying expression in her tender blue eyes.

"Poor fellow!" she sighed. "He is in great trouble, John. We hoped that if we got him off here where it is quiet he might be able to forget. Oh, but I am not supposed to tell you a word of the story! We are all sworn to secrecy."

"Women," said Billy impressively. "Then it's easily patched," said I.

"Like cures like."

"You don't understand, John," said Elsie gravely. "He was married to a beautiful"-

"Now, Elsie, you're telling," caution ed Betty Billy-Mrs. Billy Smith.

"Well," said Elsie doggedly, "I'm determined to tell this much. His name isn't Pless. His wife got a divorce frem bim, and now she has taken their child and run off with it, and they can't find-what's the matter?"

My eyes were almost popping from my head.

"Is-is be a count?" I cried, so loudly that they all said "Sh!" and shot ap prenhensive giances toward the pseudo Mr. Pless.

"Goodness!" said Elsie in alarm. "Don't shout, John."

Billy Smith regarded me speculative ly. "I daresay Mr. Smart has read all about the affair in the newspapers."

"I haven't seen anything about it in the papers," said I, trying to recover my self possession which had sustained a most tremendous shock.

"Thank heaven!" cried Elsie devoutly.

"The poor fellow is almost distracted. Really, Mr. Smart, we planned this little visit here simply in order to -to take him out of himself for awhile. It has been such's tragedy for him. He worshiped the child." It was Mrs. Billy who spoke.

him?" I queried. resorting to a suddenly acquired cunning.

"Poor fellow!" she sighed.

"It is a girt," said Elsie in a loud whisper-"the loveliest girl. The mother appeared in Vienna about three weeks or a month ago and-whiff!-off goes the child. Abducted-kidnaped! And the court had granted him the custody of the child. That's what makes it so terrible. If she is caught anywhere in Europe-well, I don't know what may happen to her. It is just girls the laughingstocks of the whole world.

By this time I had myself pretty well in hand.

"I daresay the mother loved the child, which ought to condone one among her multitude of sins. I take it. of course, that she was entirely to blame for everything that happened."

They at once proceeded to tear the poor little mother to shreds, delicately and with finesse, to be sure, but none the less completely.

"What was her social standing in New York?" I inquired.

"Oh, good enough," said Betty Billy. She was in the smartest set, if that is a recommendation."

To my disgust the three of them refused to entighten me further as to the history, identity or character of either Mr. or Mrs. Pless, but of course i knew that I was entertaining under my root by the most extraordinary coincidence the Count and Countess of Something-or other, who were at war, and the child they were fighting for

"What time do we dine?" asked Mr. Pless later, with a suppressed yawn.

"At 8," said Elsie promptly. "I think I'll take a nap," said he. With a languid smile and a little flaunt of his hand as it dismissing us, be moved languidly off, but stopped after a few steps to say to me, "We'll explore the castle tomorrow, Mr. Smart, if it's just the same to you." He spoke with a very slight accent and in a peculiarly attractive manner. There was charm to the man, I was bound to admit. "I know Schloss Rothhoefen very well. It is an old stamping ground of mine."

"Indeed!" said I, affecting surprise, "I spent a very joyous season here not so many years ago. Hohendahi is a bosom friend."

I was eager to steal away to the east wing with the news, so somewhat later I knocked at the countess' door. I realized that it was a most unseemly hour for calling on a young, beautiful and unprotected lady, but the exigencies of the moment lent moral support to my invasion.

The countess' French maid peered

"Tell your mistress that I must see her at once." "Madame is not at home, m'sieur," said the young woman. "Not at home " I gasped. "Where is she?"

"Madame has gone to bed." "Oh!" I said blinking. "Then she is at home. Present my compliments and ask her to get up. Something very exasperating has hap". "Madame has request me to inform m'sleur that she knows the count is here and will you be so good as to call tomorrow morning."

"What! She knows be's here? Who brought the information?"

"The bountiful Max, m'sleur, He sitty acts as this that make American bring it with dejeuner, again with diner and but now with the hot water. m'sieur.'

"Oh, I see!" said I profoundly. "La that case I-shan't disturb ber."

Very stiffly and ceremoniously I advised caution for the next twelve hours and left.

Now it may occur to you that any self respecting gentleman in possession of a castle and a grain of common sense would have set about to find out the true names of the guests beneath his roof. But it so happens that I rather enjoyed the mystery. The situation was unique, the comedy most exhilarating. Of course there was a tragic side to the whole matter, but, now that I was in for it, why minimize the povelty by adopting arbitrary measures? Somewhat gleefully I decided that it would be good fun to keep myself in the dark as long as

When I reached the room where my guests were assembled I found Mr. Pless and the Baron Umovitch engaged in an acrimonious dispute over a question of bridge etiquette. The former had resented a sharp criticism coming from the latter, and they were to be five or six different tongues, none of which appeared to bear the slightest relationship to the English language. Suddenly Mr. Pless threw his cards down and left the table without a word of apology to the two ladies, who looked more burt than appalled. He said he was going to bed, but I noticed that he took himself off in the direction of the moonlit loggia. We were still discussing his defection in subdued tones-with the exception of the irate baron-when he re-entered the room. "Are there real spirits in your castle, Mr. Smart, or have you flesh and blood mediums here who roam about in white night dresses to study the moods of the moon from the dizziest ramparts?"

started. What indiscretion had the countess been up to?

"I don't quite understand you, Mr. Pless," I said, with a politely blank

"My dear countess," said I the next morning, "while I am willing to admit that all you say is true, there still remains the unbappy fact that you were very near to upsetting everything last night. Mr. Pless saw you quite plainly. The moon was very full, you'll remember. Fortunately he

"I-1 wish I could have a peep at him some time without being"-

"For heaven's sake, don't even consider such a thing." I cried in alarm. "Just a little peek, Mr. Smart," she pleaded.

She fairly dragged me out into the corridor and then, picking up her dainty skirts, pattered down the rickety stairs at so swift a pace that I had some difficulty in keeping ber pink figure in sight. Why is it that a woman can go downstairs so much faster than a man? I've never been able to ex-

At last we came to the broad hall at the top of the main staircase. Almost directly in front of us loomed the great padlocked doors leading to the other wing. Passing them like the wind, she led the way to the farthermost end of the hall. Light from the big paneless windows overlooking the river came streaming into the vast corridor, and I could see doors ahead to the right and the left of us.

"Your bedroom?" I managed to gasp, uttering a belated question that should have been asked five or six flights higher up at a time when I was better qualified to voice it. "What the dickens is it doing down here?"

She did not reply, but, turning to the left, threw open a door and disappeared into the room beyond. I followed ruthlessly, but stopped just over the threshold to catch my breath in aston-

The more stringent the Law to uncover movable property the faster it moves and hides, and this fact is so well established the assessors in most counties let movable property go by default. So-called Uniform taxation is a delusion and a snare. It may suffice to fool the ignorant, but the knowing ones just laugh at it. This is rough on the poor man whose all is in sight and immovable, and is also tough on the rich man who defies the law and hides his wealth from the assessor, for he knows he is doubly guilty in saving himself at the expense of his less fortunate neighbor.

STARTING AND BUILDING UP DAIRY HERD

Double Time-Production at Nine Years Two Months Old, During Seven Days, 20.59 pounds of Butter Fat-Next to Highest Authenticated Jersey Record for This Time.

With the average farmer the cheap- 1 est and most satisfactory way of starting a dairy herd is to select as foundation stock good grade cows and a purebred bull of one of the strictly dairy breeds. The grading up will be most rapid when the predominant blood in the grades corresponds with the blood of the sire.

A foundation of this kind, of course, does not produce stock that can be registered, but by continuing the use of good, pure-bred bulls of the same blood, stock is soon obtained which. so far as mfik and butter production are concerned, very closely approaches in value that of pure breeding.

To start with a pure-bred herd is practically beyond the means of the majority of farmers. Furthermore, there is an objection to placing wellcared-for, pure-bred cows under average conditions as to feed, care and management, because under any such change the attainment of satisfactory results would be practically impossible. Where there is a gradual infusion of pure blood, as in the case of grading up a herd with pure-bred sires, the new blood is gradually accustomed to the change of environnecessary time to change his methods to meet the requirements of purebred cattle.

Where the dairyman understands the management of pure-bred stock and has the means with which to purchase the right kind, a pure-bred herd

One of the chief dangers in startof funds to procure the right sort of animals. Instead of purchasing a purebred bull and a number of pure-bred cows of common merit, it is better policy to buy relatively cheap grade cows, and to add the money thus saved to that originally set aside for the bull. This extra money is likely to be the means of securing a bull of outstanding merit.

Whether the cows be grades or Property differs so greatly in char pure-breds, it is of the highest imbeen impossible to tax the various to secure a pure-bred bull of real merit. Unless the bull is descended from good milkers, it is folly to expect him to produce good milkers, no matter how fine or ideal he may be as an individual.

It is, furthermore, of importance to remember that a herd cannot be successfully built up unless the bulls that are successively used belong to the same breed. If the grading up is begun with a Jersey bull the process must be continued uninterruptedly by the use of Jersey blood.

The importance of the dairy sire is recognized in the expression: "The bull is half the herd." Usually, however, the bull is more than half the herd, either for good or bad. In the case of common or grade cows, for example, the pure-bred bull may count for three-quarters or more of the herd by reason of his greater prepotency. To so great an extent does the bull determine the improvement or deterioration of the herd as to call for the utmost caution in his selection. In the case of a dairy bull, especially a young bull, his chief value is de-termined by the performance of his ancestry. The points of greatest importance to consider in his pedigree are the following: (1) The merit of his mother and his sire's mother. (2) The merit of the daughters of his sire and grandsire. (3) The value of the daughters of his dam and his grand-dam. (4) The value of his sisters, if he has any, and (5) the value of his own progeny, if he has any. The further back consecutively good records can be traced the more valuable the animal. It should always be remembered, however, that near ancestors count for a good deal more than those more remotely related.

With a first class bull at the head of the herd, rapid improvement is effected by selecting and retaining calves from only the best milkers, at the same time culling out those cows whose records have not been satisfactory. This work cannot be done to best advantage unless records are milk from each cow for a whole lactation period.

Where all of the cows in the foundation stock are grades, none of the threshed with a regular grain threshcalves, of course, can be registered. ing machine and the straw may be It is desirable, therefore, to add to the herd from time to time, as means does not make as good hay as it permit, some good pure-bred cows of would if the crop was cut earlier. the same blood as the bulls that have Still it is worth saving and stock been used. The purchase of cows, however, is always attended with the danger of tically essential, because of the aid introducing contagious diseases into they give in pollination. This is the chasing of cows should be carried on in a limited way only. It is, of course, always in order to buy cows when the object is to add to the herd purebred individuals of exceptional dairy merit. But the practice of buying cows should never be carried to the point of making it the principal means of replenishing the herd, especially since the latter can be accomplished much more satisfactorily by raising the calves from the best cows,

TURNING CATTLE ON CLOVER

Preventive Measures Are Always Best in Warding Off Bloat-Make Change in Feed Gradually.

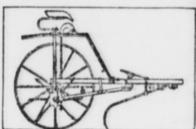

When cattle consume large quantities of green which they have not been accustomed to it rapidly ferments in the paunch, and the gas there produced causes distension of this large stomach on the left side of the animal, with the characteristic appearance and general train of symptoms familiar to most cattle owners.

Preventive measures always give the most satisfactory results in warding off this condition. Sudden changes of feed are risky at all times. but more so, perhaps, in this trouble than in some others. When first turning cattle on clover it should be done gradually until the digestive organs become accustomed to the change; and the safest way is not to permit them to eat this succulent feed for longer than 20 minutes to half an hour the first day, and increase the length of the period each day afterwards until it seems to have lost its bloating effect. It is safer, also, not to turn the cattle on to this pasture until the dew or frost has gone off it. Another method is to allow the cattle some dry feed, such as hay, etc., before turning them on the clover, which tends to prevent fermentation of so much of the green feed. After a short while, when the stomach has accommodated itself to the change from the dry to the succulent feed, the animals may consume uantities of the out apparent inconvenience,

MAYONNAISE DRESSING EASY TO MAKE.

The making of mayonnaise dressing was formerly regarded as a very trouaffair. Exceptional cooks or housewives, it is true, would assert that it was no trouble, once the knack was acquired; but as a rule it was not pular dressing with busy cooks. The reason was not far to seek. In ne first place, tradition held that if anaise dressing curdled it must thrown out and a new mixture started; and, as it often curdles, this was not a cheerful prospect to face when time was short. Strawberries in Jelly.

Make some lemon jelly with one pint of water, six small or four large mons, ten ounces of sugar, about an succe of gelatin and one wineglass of sherry wine. Squeeze the juice from the lemons on the sugar, adding the water, and, when dissolved, strain it and add the gelatin which has been dissolved. Pour this into small folds or cups and set on ice to harden. When ready to serve, turn them carefully from the cups and cut out the center, which is to be filled with choice berries and whipped cream.

Rice Meringue.

Cook half a cupful of rice in one quart of milk until tender, and the olks of four eggs beaten until light and mixed with half a teaspoonful of salt and half a cupful of sugar; cook two minutes longer, then remove from the fire, flavor with two teaspoonfuls of vanilla and turn into a baking dish. Beat the whites of the eggs until stiff, id in three tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar, flavor with a few drops of lemon. Spread this over the pudding and brown lightly.

Vanilla Ice Cream.

Two quarts of milk, two cans conleased milk, one-half pint of cream, a tablespoonful vanilla and very little, if any, sugar. This is smooth and he grated. Coffee ice cream is made he same way by using three pints of milk and one pint of strong coffee.

Pres. Wilson will vote on Oct. 19 to give the women of New Jersey the ballot. His intention is semi-officially announced by persons near to the President.

This is no news to the suffragists, though it is, of course, a great gratification to them. The President is a distinguished convert. Six or seven years ago, he was decidedly opposed to votes for women, and so expressed himself. Later he ceased to call himself an opponent, and said he was considering the question. Ever since his election to the presidency, both suffragists and antis have plied him with their best arguments, pro and con. The arguments of the suffragists have evidently proved the more con-

Homen Attention

Is it possible there is a woman in this country who continues to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, which proves beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other one medicine in the world?

We have published in the newspapers of the United States more genuine testimonial letters than have ever been published in the interest of any other medicine for womenand every year we publish many new testimonials, all genuine and true. Here are three never before published:

From Mrs. S. T. Richmond, Providence, R. I.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—" For the benefit of women who suffer as I have done I wish to state what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I did some heavy lifting and the doctor said it caused a displacement. I have always been weak and Foverworked after my baby was born and inflammation set in, then nervous prostration, from which I did not recover until I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The Compound is my best friend and when I hear of a woman with troubles like mine I try to induce her to take your medicine."—Mrs. S. T. RICHMOND, 84 Progress Avenue, Providence, R.I.

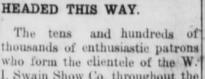

From Mrs. Maria Irwin, Peru, N.Y.

Peru, N.Y.—"Before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was very irregular and had much pain. I had lost three children, and felt worn out all the time. This splendid medicine helped me as nothing else had done, and I am thankful every day that I took it."—Mrs. Maria Irwin, R.F.D. 1, Peru, N.Y.

From Mrs. Jane D. Duncan, W. Quincy, Mass. SOUTH QUINCY, MASS .- "The doctor said that I had organic trouble and he doctored me for a long time and I did not get any relief. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and I tried it and found relief before I had G finished the first bottle. I continued taking it all through middle life and am now a strong, healthy woman and earn my own living."—Mrs. Jane D. Duncan, Forest Avenue, West Quincy, Mass.

PRESIDENT PEYTON IS NOW A "VETERAN."

Confederate veterans returnto their homes from the State reunion at Memphis recently and learning that President John Howe Peyton's ear was attached to the train, waited upon him and invited him forward to meet the members of the Tennessee delegation.

Later he was elected to honorary membership in Company B., U. C. V., of Nashville, an honor which has been conferred uon but three presidents of the road. In a speech of acceptance President Peyton expressed his deep appreciation of the honor.

The N. C. & St. L. Railway figured considerably in the military operations in this territory, and many of the big battles of the war were fought along its right of way. Recently the road took up the work of establishing markers at all points of historical interest, and inasmuch as the idea originated with President Peyoriginated with President Peyton, it is entirely proper that the veterans should take the action they did.
